The work period in Japan offers designers and artists the opportunity to conduct artistic and technical research and develop their own work through intensive interaction with the participating porcelain producers in Saga. The porcelain industry in this region and the tradition of porcelain painting have existed since 1616. The specific Arita porcelain is of high quality and centres on hand-painting work.

what is the objective?

Creative Residency Arita (CRA) is an international artist-in-residence programme of Saga prefecture and the city of Arita. The work period has been set up in collaboration with the Creative Industries Fund NL and the Mondriaan Fund to stimulate crossovers and experiments. Through this open call, the funds aim to initiate new exchanges between Dutch designers and artists and local porcelain producers and craftsmen. This enables participants to learn techniques within Japan's oldest porcelain industry and apply these in their own work. The work period offers opportunities for deepening understanding of the local context of the Saga region, which can subsequently contribute to new insights or applications for existing design practices. Since exchange is central to the objectives of the residency programme, the programme expects selected designers and artists to bring new perspectives and create opportunities for future collaboration with local porcelain producers and craftsmen.

Read more about the porcelain industry in Saga. Artists and designers who previously spent three months in Arita include Marlou Breuls, Bas Kosters, Afra Eisma and Lisa Konno. View an overview of the former residents here.

practical information about the residency

Accommodation: Two artists or designers work in Arita per period. The residents stay together in a house where each has their own bedroom available. The living room, bathroom and kitchen are shared. There is also a small work studio at the residence, equipped with additional facilities such as a simple 3D printer. A bicycle is available for daily transport. Each resident has their own studio space in the Saga Ceramics Research Laboratory, one of the best-equipped and leading research institutes in the field of porcelain, where specialists are available for technical advice.

Guidance: At the beginning of the work period, the residents are linked by the Saga Ceramic Industry Association to one of the potteries in Arita. These potteries will help with technical support and firing the works. The residents also discuss their plans with the director and coordinators. They link the residents to partner organisations in the Saga ceramics region such as Hizen, Imari and Ureshino.

English-speaking, local coordination staff are present to help residents a few days a week with discussions with the potteries and other practical questions. The staff also assist participants in finding their way in and around Arita/Saga.

Results: The experiences and results of the work period are shared through lectures and/or exhibitions in Arita/Saga and/or the Netherlands.

what is assessed?

The assessment of this open call takes the form of a tender: this means that a number of proposals will be preferred over others. The assessment based on the criteria leads to a ranking of the submitted proposals. This means that the two available work periods will be awarded to the applicants whose applications scored highest on the ranking list. Only positively assessed projects can be supported.

The Creative Industries Fund NL seeks advice from external advisers with relevant expertise in the field of product and ceramic design and the international context when assessing submitted proposals. The advisers assess the extent to which the proposal matches the objective of this open call. They base their opinion on the following criteria:

a. The artistic quality of the work

The committee reviews the applicant's portfolio and CV and their position within the field. They assess the quality and development of the applicant's work in relation to the location and theme.

b. The quality of the project plan

The committee assesses the project plan and whether it meets the applicant's objectives. They assess the extent to which the proposed activities contribute to their artistic and professional development. The committee also looks at the proposed creative approach for the chosen theme in the plan for the work period.

c. The motivation in relation to the objective and mission of the residency

The committee assesses whether the plan matches the objective and/or mission of the Arita residency. They also consider the contribution the applicant can make to strengthening collaboration and long-term exchange in Saga prefecture.

The above criteria contribute equally to the final score per application. The advisers apply the assessment method as described in the Advisory Committee Procedure of the Creative Industries Fund NL.

If two applications end up with the same final score, priority will be given to the proposal with the highest score on criterion c. The motivation in relation to the objective of the residency.
